After Care:

Turf:

Fertilising

When applying chemical nutrients, great care should be taken and the manufacturer's recommendations must be followed to the letter. Over application of any chemical treatment can cause the plants to die.

Simplicity is the key. Grass plants need a nitrogen rich fertiliser during the spring/summer growing season and phosphorus to encourage root growth during late autumn. Fertiliser should be applied every eight to ten weeks throughout the growing season. A healthy lawn that receives adequate nutrients applied at the correct time of year is able to fight off weed infestation and disease.

Mowing

After seven to ten days of laying turf in spring and summer, the grass should be well enough established to commence mowing. A good way to check is to turn back a corner of the turf. If it is well anchored by roots it is all right to start mowing. For the first cut, make sure that the mower is set at a height to just top the grass. A good rule of thumb is to never remove more than 25% of the total plant. This prevents stress to the plant and if not using a grass box, will reduce the quantity of unsightly and damaging clippings. For the best results mow at least twice weekly during the late spring, once a week during summer (if dry) and early autumn and approximately every ten days, mid to late autumn. Obviously this must be flexible to suit our varied weather conditions. Make sure your mower is maintained and sharp; mowers can damage the grass if not properly maintained.

Lawn Care Calendar

January To March

Not a lot to do to the lawn during this period, the grass growth is slowed right down because of the cold conditions. Try to stay off the lawn if it is covered in frost or very wet. Perhaps get the lawn mower serviced ready for spring.

March

Time to get the lawn mower out of hibernation and dusted off ready to make the first cut of the season. The smell of fresh grass clippings having been a distant memory will stimulate the senses and bring back memories of warmer days. Don't be too harsh with your first clip, set the mower high and just remove the top. If your lawn is prone to worm casts then brush off before mowing with a besom broom.

Spring

You will need to mow the lawn at least once a week now. Gradually reduce the height of cut to the desired level. Feed the lawn with a nitrogen based fertiliser. This will green up and thicken up the lawn. If any weeds have invaded the lawn use a weed and feed. If you have bare areas (perhaps where leaves have laid) then scratch over with a spring tine rake and throw down some grass seed or for instant results with no risk of weeds patch in with new turf.

Summer

Mow once or twice a week depending on weather conditions. Apply another nitrogen rich lawn feed to keep the lawn really green. If a few persistent weeds remain use a spot treatment. If the weather turns hot and dry keep the cutting height up and use a sprinkler early morning or in the evening to keep the lawn healthy.

September

Mow once a week and feed with autumn fertiliser. If you notice the appearance of large numbers of crane fly then treat the lawn for leather jackets (crane fly larvae), these do a lot of damage by eating the grass roots (Bayer 'Lawn Grub Killer' is available in most garden centres and through us). You should also spike the lawn to relieve compaction and introduce oxygen.

September Onwards

Remove any leaves as they fall. Mow the grass until temperatures dictate otherwise. Over sow or re-turf the lawn if necessary if bare patches have appeared due to heavy use.

Paving

Aftercare – How to keep your stone looking great for years to come
Natural stone paving is a great hardwearing option that requires very little maintenance.

To keep your new patio or path looking pristine, there are a few things you can do to protect your investment:

Sealing

- Sealing your stone isn't absolutely necessary but it might be something you want to consider.
- Helps to prevent bleaching – very important for black limestone (for protection against sun/acid rain)
- Makes future cleaning easier
- Helps protect against weeds, mould & algae (is your patio in a damp area or with trees overhead?)
- Can sometimes enhance the colour – some sealants will change the appearance, some won't (read the label & test)
- Repeat after 2 years or so if needed

Regular Brushing – 3-4 times a year

- Don't let dirt to settle on the stone for too long
- For a basic clean brush with soapy water
- Use a stiff brush

Removing Stains

- Start with just a power washer
- Use a cleaning product – test it on a small part first
- Try not to power wash the joints too much – this might make them loose

All cleaning and sealing is at owner's own risk. We cannot be held responsible for any possible effects or damage caused by sealing or cleaning.

Always read the manufacturer's instructions before application and test on a small area or off-cut/test piece before full use.

Brickwork

Brick is durable and built to last, but there are some things that can cause damage to your brick work which, if not caught early, can lead to more serious problems such as water ingress or even complete wall collapse. There are a few simple things that you can do to care for and to maintain your brickwork.

Clean your brickwork

Once a year it is advisable to properly look over your brickwork and clean any areas that are showing obvious dirt. This can be as simple as hosing it down with the spray nozzle on your garden hose, or in some cases it may be necessary to mix one capful of bleach into a gallon of water before using a natural bristle brush to gently scrub off any areas of moss, mould or mildew (this can result from areas of brickwork that do not get much natural light and are close to overhanging vegetation). Ensure that you give the brick a good soaking before applying the bleach solution to avoid the brick absorbing the bleach.

Avoid water damage

Water can damage your brick from two sources. Firstly from rain beating against your brick eventually soaking into the mortar causing the mortar and/or brick to split or crack. Or as a result of rising damp, when the salt crystals left behind after the damp naturally evaporates cause damage to both the mortar and the brick. Once the brick is water damaged, freezing and thawing cycles can quickly cause further damage to the brick, so catching water damage early is essential.

Repointing

If the mortar of your bricks has been damaged it will be necessary to repoint it. This will give your brick work a new lease of life and leave it looking much neater too. When repointing it is essential that all damaged mortar is carefully removed before adding thin layers of new mortar to form a safe and waterproof seal, mortar should be replaced to a depth of at least twice the width of the joint. It is also important to ensure that the new mortar matches to colour and texture of your existing mortar.
